

Temperature to Rise in Arkansas

By UNITED PRESS

Rising temperatures were forecast for the north portion of Arkansas tonight, and were expected to spread across the entire state Thursday. Skies will be clear to partly cloudy during the next 24 hour period, and Friday will be partly cloudy and mild.

Highs this afternoon were expected to hold in the 40's, lows tonight 28 to 30, and highs Thursday in the 50's.

The high in Arkansas Tuesday was 50 at Ozark, the low this morning 19 at Gilbert and Mountain Home.

The extended forecast, Wednesday through next Monday, said temperatures will average five to eight degrees below the normal maximum of 62 and the normal

No Polio in State in Four Weeks

LITTLE ROCK (UPI)—Arkansas weathered its fourth calendar week of 1958 without a case of polio being reported to the State Board of Health.

The weekly morbidity report issued Wednesday, said no polio cases had been reported this year, through last Saturday, compared with one at the same time a year ago.

The state, however, had 52 cases of measles during the week, 50 of them in Clark county. Single cases were reported in Little Rock and at Fort Chaffee. The figure compared with 35 the previous week and 38 the same week a year ago. The state has 199 to date this year, compared with 106 the first four weeks of 1957.

Governor Cites Industrial Drive

LITTLE ROCK (UPI)—Gov. Orval Faubus said Tuesday industrial development is the "key-stone" of his administration.

He told agents and officials of the Arkansas Farmers Union Mutual Insurance Company that the industrial growth benefits "all of us," and said he believes Arkansas has been less harmed by the present economic recession than any other one state.

That is because of the industrial expansion of 300 new or enlarged industries in the past 30 months, he explained. The growth created 21,000 new jobs, he said, with a payroll of more than $60 million.

The Arkansas Industrial Development Commission hasn't tried to steal industries, Faubus commented. It has just tried to "get our fair share of the new industries and the expansion of existing industries."

minimum of 33. It will be "further cold" with only brief periods of mild temperatures. Precipitation during the period will be light or none at all, with some rain by early next week.

At 11 a.m., skies were cloudy at Flippin, partly cloudy at Walnut Ridge, Fayetteville and Memphis, and clear elsewhere in Arkansas. Walnut Ridge had 35, Fayetteville 41, Flippin 42, Memphis 44, Fort Smith 45, Little Rock 47, Pine Bluff and Texarkana 48, and El Dorado 49.

the head."

"There are seven of us kids—Gregg, 7; David, 13; Bob, 15; Lavelle, 16; Charlie, me and Leonard, 22," he said. "Leonard is a chef in Washington."

"We used to hunt a lot. The old man (Guy Starkweather, a carpenter, the father) used to take us kids out to the Meyer place a lot. Ever since I was old enough to hold a gun, I used to go out there."

August Meyer, about 70, a farmer living near Bennet, was one of the six known murder victims.

Asked for a possible motive, Rodney said that other than "money or something," he had no idea of what might be troubling his brother.

"I guess he did it. But I don't why," he said.

thing might have happened" to Carol.

Before 11 a.m., Sanders admitted he had "nothing to go on" in the search.

Two False Alarms

"I think he's still in the area," said Sanders, "because the second car (stolen from Jensen) has not turned up. Besides, we have been getting few reports, however reliable, of any sightings and this is most unusual."

One of the "sightings" came from Muskogee. A Central Airlines ticket agent said a boy about 18 or 19, who had a teen-aged girl in his car, inquired about a Kansas City, Mo., flight Tuesday night. The agent, Don Keener, said the descriptions matched those of Starkweather and Miss Fugate.

The Kansas City "sighting," which attracted seven patrol cars, turned out to be a false alarm. It was another young Nebraska couple.

Scheele filed the charges in the King girl's slaying today. He said that naming only one victim was all that was necessary.

During the night many rumors cropped up that the missing pair had been seen in nearby portions of Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa in the 1950 model blue Ford sedan, equipped with twin tail pipes.

There was some confusion at first descriptions of Starkweather and Miss Fugate. One report said he weighed more than 200 pounds but these were eventually clarified, and he was described as short, 5 feet, 5 inches tall, and weighing about 140 pounds. He is believed wearing a black jacket and blue jeans.

Starkweather's brother called him a "crack shot."

Motives Are Obscure

Farmers around Bennet, keeping shotguns handy throughout the night, were calling him a "bad dog" and a "crazy killer." Roadblocks were maintained in the Lincoln area, but it was feared that all the slayings were committed by Monday night and the missing pair had time to make a getaway into another state, despite Sanders' opinion.

The motives in the slayings were obscure. Police investigated one theory that Carol might have learned something about the Colvert killing and told her parents, and that they then were slain. Their bodies were found Monday afternoon in outbuildings behind the girl's run-down home in Lincoln, along with that of their 2-year-old daughter.

Meyer's body was found at his farm home, and the bodies of Jensen and Miss King were found jammed into a storm cellar at an abandoned school site.

The elder Bartlett, Meyer and the teen-agers had been shot. The Bartlett child died of a skull fracture. Colvert was slain with a shotgun blast at the station, where Starkweather visited frequently.

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI)—Police today hunted a teenage "mad dog" killer and his 15-year-old girl friend, fearful that the girl, too, may have fallen victim to the youth they believe has slain at least six persons.

First degree murder charges were filed Tuesday night against both Charles Starkweather, 19, a husky red-haired marksman sporting a black leather jacket, and his friend, Carol Fugate.

They were charged with killing one of six persons found slain since the couple disappeared Monday. Three of the victims were Carol's mother, step-father and half-sister.

Police said circumstances of another killing attributed to Starkweather made them fear he may have turned on Carol and slain her, too, before completing a savage rampage that has taken possibly eight lives.

Farmers near Lincoln kept shotguns handy and threatened to shoot first and ask questions later if any strangers appeared. They called Starkweather a "mad dog" and a "crazy killer."

Nebraska safety patrolmen, with orders to "shoot to kill if necessary," manned roadblocks throughout the Lincoln area. However, authorities said the couple had time to flee into another state, and issued a Midwest alert.

The fugitives apparently fled in a "hot rod" car stolen from two victims, a teen-aged couple from nearby Bennet, Neb.

Evidence mounted that Starkweather's first victim was Robert Colvert, 21, a service station attendant shot and killed Dec. 1 in a robbery-murder near the house. Jensen and Miss King were Myers' head had been blasted with a shotgun and his body left in a washroom at the rear of the house. Jensen and Miss King were shot in the head with small caliber bullets and their bodies were stuffed into a storm cellar at an abandoned school ground.

Lancaster County Atty. Elmer Scheele said Miss King was the victim of an "unnatural sex attack."

Carol had not been seen since Monday afternoon shortly before the bodies of her family members were found.

Starkweather, a 6-foot-1 inch 210 pound former garbage collector, was described by his brother as a "good shot who always hit his game 'right in the head.'"

Carol was described as about 5 feet 1 inches tall weighing 140 pounds, with a scar over her right eye and her hair worn in a pony tail. She was wearing black jeans and a blue parka coat.

Milk Producers Ask Help of Faubus

LITTLE ROCK (UPI)—The Central Arkansas Milk Producers Association called on Gov. Orval Faubus Tuesday for help in protesting a reduction in federal dairy support prices.

David L. Parr, secretary-manager of the association, said the proposed reduction would mean a loss of $10,000,000 this year to Arkansas dairy farmers.

"This new reduction will cause even more folks to give up their dairy farms," he said. "It won't take long for a real shortage of milk to occur. Then the consumers will really feel the increase in milk prices."

Parr said almost 300 dairy farmers have given up in the past two years.

Faubus said he would poll the legislature and their opinions would be given to the association. He said he was in sympathy with the farmers, but doubted his protest would be effective.

Reuther Says Auto Prices Are 'Rigged'

WASHINGTON (UP)—The United States accused Soviet Communist Party boss Nikita Khrushchev today of spreading a "distorted view" of U.S. policies and motivations in world affairs.

A statement read by State Department press officer Lincoln White said this shows "the difficulties which would beset a short, unprepared meeting of heads of government such as the Soviet government has proposed."

In answer to a question, White said the U.S. view on holding a summit meeting with Russia remains as set forth by President Eisenhower in his Jan. 12 letter to Soviet Premier Nikolai Bulganin.

White said that "calls for adequate preparation" at the diplomatic and foreign ministers level. Khrushchev has said the U.S. proposal for banning long-range missiles would protect U.S. territory but preserve weapons which could "keep the whole world in a state of war."

White said Khrushchev "pointedly omits any mention of the long series of initiatives of the United States for peace as well as its long constant record of non-aggression."

U. S. Accuses Khrushchev of Distortion

WASHINGTON (UP)—Walter P. Reuther today accused the auto industry's big three of rigging prices and pursuing policies which he said could plunge the country into economic "disaster."

Reuther, president of the United Auto Workers, fired a verbal broadside at the big three—General Motors, Ford and Chrysler—in testimony before the Senate Anti monopoly subcommittee.

He charged that the auto industry leaders have hiked prices for no reason, "short-changing" the public and producing serious unemployment.

This, he said, is one reason why the United States "is limping along in long gear" while Russia is using "every ounce of muscle."

Reuther urged Congress to require big corporations to justify proposed price increases before putting them into effect.

He contended that wage boosts have not been responsible for inflated car prices. Labor, he said, has been chasing after the price movement, not pushing it.

Reuther said the big auto firms are "taking more than their share," thereby siphoning off of purchasing power and upsetting the entire economy.

Reuther spoke extemporaneously to the subcommittee, following a 110-page prepared statement, a given white carnation corsage.

A tall white branch with hanging tiny red hearts tied with white satin ribbon graced one end of the mantle and a low arrangement of red carnations in a white container was placed on the opposite end of the mantle.

The bride's table was covered with a white "madras" cloth and centered with two large white heart shaped cakes on which Sue and Jim were inscribed in red. The heart cakes were placed on two large red hearts fluted with white net and the hearts were tied with a large bow on red and white nylon lace which extended the length of the table. Red split carnations were placed on white lace and white split carnations on the red lace. The napkins were white with Sue and Jim written in red. Red candles in crystal holders completed the table arrangements.

Frozen punch was poured by Mrs. Fred Glanton and individual heart cakes were served by Mrs. Galloway Woodard of Magnolia both sisters of the bride-elect.

Mrs. Glanton, Mrs. Woodard and the hostesses, wore red camellia corsages. The many lovely gifts were displayed for the 45 guests.

The delicious home made chili made by Mr. James was served with other members bringing the dessert and salads. A most enjoyable time was spent following the pot-luck.

DOROTHY DIX

Rule For Happiness — Do Unto Others, Etc.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I'm in love with a real sweet boy of 20 and the whole world seems against us. He has a bad reputation in our small town because (1) he fathered the child of a local girl and though he admits the baby is his, he won't do a thing for it, and (2) he never keeps a job more than a few months. He doesn't drink or gamble, is wonderfully attentive to me, we're congenial in our tastes and I'm sure as soon as he has saved his wild oats we can settle down to a sound married life. My mother, who objects to him with vim and vigor, claims it's my duty to persuade him to marry the mother of his child. What do you think about it?

ISOBEL

Dear Isobel: Have you been reading any Victorian novels lately? Where else would you find that "sown his wild oats" gambit. It might have once served as an alibi for moral weakness but those days passed with Haley's comet.

You're an incurable optimist if you expect a man with so ignoble a past to suddenly possess the qualities that will make him a desirable husband. A young man who has deserted one family is scarcely the material from which a responsible father is made. A youth who has failed to show any loving toward work won't be the one to bring home groceries.

As for those "wild oats," how can you know that they've all been sown? Because your boy friend whispers sweet nothings in your ear? Think again. Your mother is right. If you have any influence with the boy, try to get him to marry the girl who's working so hard to bring up his child. In this way you'll help her and certainly save yourself a whole lot of misery.

Dear Dorothy Dix: We've been happily married for 20 years. Now my husband has suddenly taken an interest in fishing. I've heard from many women that this is a favorite alibi for men who want to be unfaithful, so naturally I oppose it. Don't you think I'm right?

MAXINE F.

Dear Maxine: The lengths some of you women will go to stir up trouble. Believe me, if your husband's only vice is an interest in fishing, you're playing in all sorts of luck. This is the most innocuous diversion he could find. Unless he finds a mermaid, women are very scarce around fishing grounds. Leave him be, for heaven's sake.

Dear Dorothy Dix: When a husband has been unfaithful more than once should a wife keep it to herself? If I could tell my family and friends I'm sure I'd feel better.

Dear Luckless: No matter how hard it hurts, keep it to yourself. You'll find it much easier to save face. Blabbing about your husband's weakness won't help you a bit.

Dear Dorothy Dix: The man I love is wonderful but he can't give me as nice a home as I have with my parents. Do you think I'd be happy with him?

Dear Lee: You must judge between love and luxury. No one can help you. However, since the idea has been crossed your mind, I'd say marriage for you was a bad risk. Most pals in love can take the leap from castle to cottage without a qualm or regret.

Need Money for Exchange With Russia

NEW YORK (UP)—Dan Ferris, the man responsible for the historic athletic agreement between the United States and Russia, warned today that "we face an almost impossible task in raising the money to make the program work."

The 48-year-old Ferris beamed when he talked about the two-year agreement signed at Washington Monday providing for an exchange of U.S. and Soviet athletes, scientists and students. It could start within weeks. But there was caution in Ferris' words.

"Naturally, I'm pleased," he said. "This is a milestone. If it can be realized, it would be fine for sports and international good will. But it will cost us something like $150,000 to pay the expense for competition in track, basketball, wrestling and weight-lifting."

"Right now, it would be almost impossible to handle it because the Amateur Athletic Union doesn't have the money and our people around the country don't seem to be interested. While I'm not putting out an appeal for funds, I must say that the response we've had so far doesn't speak too well for sports interests in various cities."

If everything works out, Ferris will have realized a dream. He retired last year after 30 years as national secretary - treasurer of the AAU but has remained active as honorary secretary and chairman of the foreign affairs committee. He has devoted almost all of his time in recent weeks to attempts to get final agreement on the home-and-home competition with Russia.

Rails Postpone Rate Effective Date

WASHINGTON (UP)—The nation's major railroads today postponed the effective date of their proposed freight rate increases from Feb. 1 to Feb. 15.

Edward Kaer, chief counsel for all the railroads, said the postponement was made at the request of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The commission sought the postponement in view of the number of shippers and interested parties who have requested time to appear during oral arguments on the rate hikes.

Oral arguments begin Wednesday before the commission on whether to suspend the proposals or let them become effective. More than 30 requests have been made to the commission for a moment time.

The railroads have proposed freight rate boosts ranging from

Caesar, Miss Coca Better Than Ever

By CHARLES MENCER

NEW YORK—The return of Sid Caesar and Imogene Coca to regular weekly television (ABC-TV, Sunday nights) demonstrates that they shouldn't shoot comedians.

They should, rather, give them abnuptal leaves and bring 'em back alive. In the case of Caesar and Miss Coca, at any rate, it was good to see them back.

I think that Caesar and Miss Coca are better than they ever were.

Their timing, so essential to their delightful brand of pantomime, never was finer. The result was one of those amusing satires on human foibles in which Caesar and his first television partner remain unexcelled.

To my mind the half-hour format of their new program is preferable to the hour-length Caesar programs for a single reason: the satire remains sharp with sufficient time to be beaten into burlesque.

On the basis of the couple's first performance together in several years there is every reason to believe that the show will improve as time passes. Personally, I thought that eating routine too prolonged and overly burlesqued because I never found much source of amusement in ill-managed eating habits.

But if anyone could return to television after a few months of vacation looking as refreshed and relaxed as Caesar and Miss Coca did, then everyone should be given a few months off.

"The Face of Crime" Twentieth Century (CBS-TV, Sundays) was one of the outstanding documentaries of the season.

The searching examination of how the State of New Jersey is dealing with youthful lawbreakers at Boardman Reformatory and the Menlo Park Diagnostic Center resulted in one of the most absorbing hours that television has offered.

Airlines Are Good to CAB Board Members

WASHINGTON (UP)—House investigators have unearthed evidence purporting to show that airline executives have lavishly entertained members of the Civil Aeronautics Board, it was learned today.

The disclosure followed public hints the investigators have evidence of possible "misconduct" and White House interference in decisions by the CAB, the government agency that controls airlines.

Details of additional evidence were not available. But the investigators of a special House Commerce subcommittee were reportedly examining the books of swank country club near the capital and in Georgia.

Industry sources said the problems were carefully checking the airlines to determine sums spent on entertaining members of the CAB.

A subcommittee source said evidence thus far was "as bad as that dug up on the Federal Communications Commission. A subcommittee staff report charged that some FCC members have accepted color television sets and other costly favors from the broadcast industry. Several FCC members have publicly defended their actions as legitimate and proper.

Subcommittee Chairman Morgan M. Moulder (D-Mo.) said his group will take up the charges against the FCC next Monday. This would make the FCC the first of six independent federal agencies under investigation to have charges of "personal misconduct" formally examined.

"We are compelled to take the FCC up first," Moulder said, "because of the publicity given to the staff report." The staff report, which has not been officially made public but contents of which have leaked to the press, contained the charges against FCC members.

"When I got over there, I found they were using a different script from the one I agreed to do. Then they started on billing. I was told my name had to be in type 15 per cent of the size of hers. That was in her contract, they said. I call. Rifle fire burst from the lava all about them, and there they died, four of them.

All cohesion of forces had been lost, and direct line of command no longer existed. And when distant bugles sounded bravely, men no longer cared or listened. The virus of complete defeat was there and steadily deepening. Men began to skulk and slither away, intent on but one thing—to find a way out of this deadly trap of fog-shrouded lava where death struck suddenly and mercilessly and unseen.

Phil Ashland tried to hold the remnants of his little command together, but in the space of less than a minute, lost another man killed and another man wounded. And it was while he and Grimes, his faithful sergeant, were caring for this wounded one that the distant, nervous bugles finally sounded a note which men would now pay attention to. It was recall.

The sound was as welcome to Phil Ashland as to his men. Vaguely he wondered if he shouldn't know shame at his feeling of relief for recall in this battle spelled defeat—defeat in the first real action of his military career. Perhaps, according to his shoulders and flag wavers, he should have known shame. In stead, just a vast relief.

Fears Municipal Advertising Tax

LITTLE ROCK (UP)—A municipal tax on advertising was described Monday as "suicide death" to the advertising industry.

The statement was made by B. Fred Irby of Mobile Ala., a representative of the Advertising Federation of America. He was the speaker at the Little Rock Advertising Club's noon luncheon.

Taxes on advertising, he said, must eventually be paid by the consumer, because of the narrow profit margins of newspapers, television and radio stations.

Irby said such a tax recently went to City Council, and that it was being studied by at least four companies home by their son, Bob, who spent last week with his grandparents.

Mrs. Blanche Jones is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Nelson of San Diego, Calif.

Miss Mary Nell Bolls of Little Rock was the weekend guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bolls.

other cities. The advertising trade is vulnerable to a municipal tax, he said because few persons realize its seriousness.

"And we don't take time to explain the advertising industry to the public."

He said he was convinced that such a tax would be approved by the public were it to be put up for a vote.

Irby said that without advertising, a nickel newspaper would cost $100 and television set owners would have to pay $165 for every program watched and heard.

CHAPTER XXVII

With the fading of the order, steadiness came back to Lt. Phil Ashland. A comeliness he had not known since the attack began, returned through him. It was like a minor, catching his second wind. Half a stride behind him came the trooper, chimes footed, still muzzling to himself.

Far out in the dawning, drip-line misty ahead, guns were now hammering an almost solid roar, and here and there around Phil's small, contained, immediate command. At first he did not understand, but when one of the limbers was followed by the soldier, fading whinner of a rebel, he had his answer. These were front bullets from the ruins of the dismantled cavalry fighting in from the east.

Gravely, Phil thought, we could kill them, or they us, in this fog.

Now again, on the heels of another of these in, strangely smothered gun reports lifted the high, grumbled rumble of a mortally stricken man. At the sound, the trooper with Phil whined like a frightened animal and charged blindly off, boots screeching and crunching on lava rock, brush crackling under his tungsten wheels. He ran right into a second of silence, followed instantly by a wall of stark terror, the more heart-stopping because of the manner in which it tailed off, swiftly into a muffled down, ward fading note into the deaths of the earth itself. It ceased abruptly when, from far below, lifted the sound of sudden impact.

Some prickling, Phil Ashland followed where the trooper had gone, moving ahead with the greatest care. Instinct, as much as anything, stopped him short of a sandy fringe to brush. Beyond that brush fringe lay an irregular, yawning blackness some 20 feet across. Carrying up out of that blackness came the small, faint echo of trickling lava fragments.

Phil backed away. Now, off to his right, he heard voices and when he moved that way, found men of his strayed platoon, behind a lava flow. Grimes, the only sergeant, swore his relief.

"Seeing you safe, puts heart in me again, Lieutenant. The men want to make a fight of it, if they could just see something to fight. So far, there's been nothing but gun flashes, and after every one it seems, there's another man down, dead or wounded."

Phil nodded, dropping to his heels. "Where are the rest of the men?"

"Scenson and Murray both dead, sir. Barrow and Dean bank wounded, a bit, wounded. Barrow's bad, as dead I'm afraid. Some of the others are scattered. Like Foster and Pritch, I can't even either of them since we got into these labyrinths."

"They're both done for," Phil's words ran a little light. "Barrow was shot, French was with me for a little time, but he stumbled and ran right into a hot hole."

"You mean—buried alive, sir?"

"He fell too far to stay alive."

Of a sudden, Phil was avid with thirst. Grimes pushed a canteen at him and he held himself to a single mouthful. Phil stood up, straightening his shoulders.

"All right, men! We go ahead, keep within a stride of one another. If you can, so there'll be no more scattering. Guide on me!"

So they went ahead, slowly, carefully.

The merciless lava sliced at the soles of their boots. It scoured and gouged and brought blood wherever it touched when a man stumbled or fell.

The Mordor, well aware that here was the beginning of the end for him and all his people, knowing that there neither could, nor would be any drawing back and that eternally waited his ancient heritage fought with every deadly trick he knew.

Some among him could speak the white man's language, and a voice called through for another.

"Over here, you men!"

The words were plain, but the tone was pitiful and an alarm rang in Lt. Phil Ashland's brain and he held his men back. But some stray troopers lost to their command and desperate to make contact again, closed in on the

Campanella Has Comfort in Prayer

TODAY'S SPORT PARADE (Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.) BY OSCAR FRALEY United Press Sports Writer NEW YORK (UP)—Roy Campanella is using the same comfort for today which helped him through a hundred tight spots.

"I'm praying." That's always been Roy's ace in the hole. And he was praying hopefully today as he lay in a Glen Cove hospital with a broken back suffered in an automobile accident.

They worked for him often before. They had to for this roly-poly man to make it all the way from the Negro sandlots to one of the top spots in baseball.

You remember some of them as you look back over his career, one complete with broken bones, operations and flaming tendons. Like the time in 1951 when he went down into the basement to light the gas heater and it blew up in his face.

"I prayed hard," Roy said. He had a blistered cornea in each eye but treatments cleared it up. That same year he was benched on the left ear. But despite it all, Campy came back to win most valuable player honors for the first of three times.

Roy has had more than his share of troubles, even with his own. Jackie Robinson often "got on him" because, as Robinson and others fought for "recognition," the smiling, happy-go-lucky Campy wasn't militant enough. But he was there to play baseball, overcoming horribly battered hands and bad legs in the process, and made the best sacrifice of them all because of his smiling niceness.

Campy, a beaming Buddha, could be a clown or a gadfly on the field. He was there to run the pitchers and wield a big bat. That he did in a Hall of Fame manner. Off the field campaigns he left to others. Campy was too busy making good and making a living and a future for his family.

Just Good Business They kidded him once about parking his big, splashy Cadillac in front of his Harlem liquor store. Campy grinned hugely. "Shucks," he said, "that's so the people know I'm there. When they do, they come in and buy. That's good business — not vanity."

Another time they asked him about dissension on the team. "Dissension?" he asked. "I dunno. Maybe we got no pitchers but what we do got is harmony." Campy's secret of success—"prayer" and "tryin'." That's it, why they're not counting him "out" yet. Campy will make it back if it's humanly possible. Maybe even if it isn't possible for most humans. Because Roy has a genuine faith in his prayers—and helps them along as much as possible personally.

Improving Is Word on Campanella

GLENN COVE, N.Y. (UP)—Doctors found baseball star Roy Campanella "somewhat better" today, although still paralyzed as he fought to recover from a broken neck.

A medical bulletin reported that physicians "were encouraged after this morning's examination" even though "the paralysis remains the same and he remains on the danger list."

It was the second straight hopeful medical report on the condition of the 36-year-old catching star who escaped death Tuesday in an auto accident by just one inch.

"Campanella's condition is somewhat better and the overall picture fairly encouraging," the hospital bulletin said early this morning. "His paralysis is unchanged but it could not be expected to improve as yet."

The bulletin, issued by Dr. Robert W. Sengstacken, the neurological physician who operated more than four hours on Campanella Tuesday morning, and hospital administrator Harry Gifford, said the stricken patient "remains on the danger list." But hospital spokesmen emphasized the encouraging aspect of the bulletin as a clear indication that physicians believed Campy had won his primary battle—for life.

Dr. Sengstacken also said further bulletins on Campanella's condition will be issued on a two-day basis.

Whether Campanella, who probably is nearer 40 than his 36-year "baseball age," ever will be able to resume his baseball career remained highly doubtful. Doctors said it was "possible" he might play again but Dr. Sengstacken qualified the statement late Tuesday.

"Assuming a complete recovery, he could not play ball before a year," Dr. Sengstacken said. "He's foolish if he tries to come back to play baseball, but he's not a patient and I'm not going to tell him what to do."

Dr. Sengstacken disclosed that the fifth and sixth vertebrae of Campanella's spinal column were "fractured and dislocated" at about the neckline and said the catches would have "died instantly" had the injury been an inch higher. He said Campanella's short, bull-like neck played a key part in his escape from a fatal injury.

He said no further operations were planned.

Superior Porks Turn Back A&M to Keep Lead

PAYETTEVILLE (UP)—Arkansas, exhibiting a superior shooting and rebounding game, defeated Texas A&M 67-51 before 6,000 fans Tuesday night.

Arkansas took a quick and commanding lead in the first period on the basis of a 52 per cent field goal shooting mark, superior rebounding and its pressing man-to-man defense. They led 45-25 at the half.

Freddy Grim led the Porks in scoring with 13 points. The Aggies were led by Archie Carroll's 15 points.

The victory left Arkansas undefeated in the Southwest Conference play in five starts and with a 12-3 mark for the season. The defeat dropped the Aggies out of a four-way tie for second place and with a 3-3 record.

Snow Follows Rains in New England

Snows followed up record rains in New England today and authorities kept a wary eye on flooding rivers.

In Texas, heavy snows were hailed as a godsend to parched rangeland.

Authorities said the Neponset River in Massachusetts already had crested two feet above flood stage. The nearby Charles River, also led by the heaviest January rains in 80 years, was expected to crest today.

Rainfall in the area brimmed at 9.29 inches for the month of January. Official records showed that the nearest figure to the record amount was 7.00 inches during January, 1876. Also, an accumulation of 21.64 inches since the first of November showed that rainfall amounts in the last three months were more than in the 10 months preceding.

A 3-year-old Topsfield, Mass., boy was drowned Tuesday in his stream-flooded backyard.

Officials, meanwhile, reported eight inches of snow in the Texas Panhandle and said rain was falling all the way to the Rio Grande, West Texas, on the receding end of its most frequent snows in years, saw the precipitation as a godsend. Officials said the unusually high snowfall was helping rangeland recover from years of drought and was a boon to the winter wheat crop.

Soldier Meets Young Child He'll Adopt

NEW YORK (UP)—A 20-year-old Port Carbon, Colo., service man today met the 3½ year-old girl whom he will adopt when he becomes 21 years old next August.

SP3 Chester E. Neal, of Earle, Ark., said that adoption proceedings for pretty blonde, Carmen Mueller, cannot be completed until he is of age.

Carmen, daughter of a 23-year-old German woman whom Neal married in June, 1956, while he was stationed with the U.S. Army near Stuttgart, arrived at 8 a.m. EST on a Sabena Belgian Airlines plane from Brussels.

Carmen's mother, Maria, remained in Fort Carson while Neal came to New York to pick up the child. Neal said that he was unable to obtain a visa for Carmen at the time he and his wife left for the United States.
